Details of responsibilities and activities

Publications, reports or other materials

Please provide details of 'up to five' (at least three) publications, reports or other materials that were produced during the five years prior to this application. These documents should be chosen to best demonstrate your level of competence in the application of statistical methods. Applicants must have taken responsibility for the statistical content of their work, so it is important that you summarise your statistical contribution to those publications or reports that are jointly authored. You may wish to attach one or two documents with this application; however, this is optional.

If some of these documents are so confidential that it would be ABSOLUTELY impossible for you to provide them upon request, then you must provide a paragraph for each document which will tell a knowledgeable statistician what statistical techniques you used in the paper. A fictitious example is as follows: "I was attempting to model two variables (one continuous, and one binary) in terms of several predictor variables (some continuous and some categorical). After performing the appropriate tests of assumptions, I concluded that the continuous variable could be modelled by a general linear model after the variable had had a log transformation. The binary variable was successfully modelled by a logistic regression."

This example does not breach confidentiality, but provides information by which the assessors of your application may judge the nature of the analyses that you have performed. If your work was supervisory in nature, we would still expect a description that would allow knowledgeable statisticians to assess the nature of your statistical work.

Statistical services provided outside your employment

Please specify in the table below any statistical services that you have provided outside your employment in the five years prior to this application. (Examples: editor or reviewer for a journal, reviewer for a grant application, statistical volunteer work).
